

Kim's meeting read is the real ask. The email is not.

Kim Chen, 21 August 2026 18:03–18:05 · Alignment note

Kim is describing what Joe said in the room: a cut of referred customers, no competition engine of his own, he needs Verodus's stack, and he wants the data. The follow-up email asked for an unpaid Bookmap-style logo. Paper the meeting. Do not treat the template as the deal.

Take the referral if it is a unique code and a share of net evaluation fees. Do not share trading data. Do not give him the engine as his product. "Profits" must not mean trader payouts or company P&L.

1. Percentage of profits from directing customers

Yes — that is the only cash deal worth doing (origination / affiliate). The email did not write a rate, a SKU, or a tracking code. Force the word profits:

If he means	Verodus position
% of net evaluation fees after refunds and chargebacks, on Instant / 1-Step / Lite he actually sent	Take. 15–25%. Unique code. 90 days.
% of trader payouts / "profits" on qualified accounts	Refuse. That taxes the reward pool. Referring a buyer who later gets paid is not a claim on payouts.
% of company profit	Refuse. Not an equity or P&L partner.

Kim's "directing customers to us" is the right activity. No code, no percentage.

2. He has no trading competition. He needs our engine

Yes. Matches the public record. TradeMath championship is a Rolex essay + form. World Traders Hub HK is email-only. MoniMath PropTrade was announced 18 Nov 2025 for Jan 2026 with no public Instant / 1-Step / KYC / MT5 / TradeHub / payout stack. Verodus has the SKUs, rules, platforms, Veriff, fees, resets, and payouts. Promote a competition is a landing page. Competition engine is the evaluation CRM. If Verodus agrees, the engine stays yours. His brand can sit on the front later. Rules unchanged. He does not get a fork of the CRM.

3. He wants our data / we share the data

He wants it. You do not share it. TAMS is sold as trader behavioral analytics — the LISG vocabulary. Labeled tickets, pass/fail, daily-loss, Best Day, payout vs blow-up: Bookmap's FAQ says they do not ingest the user's trading activity. A shop like Verodus is the only place he can get that tape.

- Live Privacy: trading-behavior data is not commercialized externally.
- P&L, strategies, and behavior are not shared externally.

- Personal information is not sold.

"We share the data" is not available under current policy. Counsel would have to amend Privacy, put a DPA in place, and you would sell an anonymized license for cash — not throw it in to make a championship look real. Sharing the tape so he can run the event trains TAMS and helps him stand up PropTrade off Verodus. Origination does not require a data feed. Unique codes do.

4. Promote competition, no engine

Correct. That is the file in one sentence. He sells a 2026/27 HK final and official-partner language. He needs logo, prize Instant accounts, a cut of referrals, and if you slip, the data and the stack.

One paragraph for Kim

Joe asked in person for a cut of referred customers and for the stack behind a competition he cannot run. That is real. The email then asked for a free logo and still thinks we are Bookmap. We take the referral if it is a unique code and a share of net challenge fees, rules unchanged. We do not share trading data. We do not give him the engine as his product. If he wants PropTrade, it runs on our rails and we keep most of the GMV after a 90-day checkout floor.

Do not mix these three into one yes

- Referral % — yes, on net eval fees, tracked.
- Engine / PropTrade — later, white-label, Verodus keeps the stack.
- Data — no, unless Privacy is amended and he pays. Not part of 1 or 2.
